On this day in 1770, James Cook discovered the Great Barrier Reef

Today's plant of the day is the mangrove. This is such an amazing small tree, with a complex system of roots. See if you can find out where mangroves live and what makes them particularly special. You might find this article interesting, which talks about the effects of climate change on the Australian mangroves <https://www.abc.net.au/news/2019-07-01/concerns-northern-australian-mangroves-wiped-out-rising-seas/11265658>

PSHE The first few days of High School

Going to secondary school requires a new set of skills that might seem a bit scary at first, but after a few weeks you will have them perfected!

What skills do you think you'll need in the first few days/weeks of secondary school? It might be practical skills like planning your journey/tying a tie/finding your way around. It could be communication skills such as being polite/making new friends. Mindset skills such as resilience/independence/growth mindset/positivity – have a think and make a list for yourself. It might help to ask others in your household if they have any ideas - perhaps ask your parents to tell you about what they remember about their first few days of High School.

Then decide which skills will be your top 3 most important – write these down, and add a sentence to explain why you have chosen each one.

Do you think more things will be different or the same at secondary school?

Think of some similarities and differences and write these down on the 'things that can stay the same' and 'things that can change' pages in your transition booklet – you might struggle to think of similarities and be overwhelmed by differences. However, think of all the things in your home life and out of school that will stay the same, as well as things in school. For example, will you still have the same bedroom/will you live in the same house/will you have the same things for lunch/see the same people?

Don't forget to look at the 'Thought for the Day' on the website. Please also check in with the Class blog or Google Classroom!
