What was the Roman Empire?

The Roman Empire began in Rome and spread across most of Europe and some of Africa and Asia. Over a period of 400 years, most of Britain was part of this empire.

Why did the Romans want Britain to be part of their Empire?

Britain, or Britannia as the Romans called it, was said to be rich in gold and silver. The Romans wanted it to be part of their expanding empire and thought that they could invade easily.

In 54BC, Julius Caesar attempted to invade but he was unsuccessful. He tried again in 55BC but was again unsuccessful.

Almost 100 years later, Emperor Claudius decided to invade for a third time. This invasion was successful and 41AD marks the beginning of Roman rule in Britain.

How were the Romans able to invade?

The Roman army was the largest fighting force of its time and was both strong and well organised. The fighters were the best equipped and strictly trained – this made them unstoppable.

Did the British people fight back?

At the time, Britain was ruled by many different tribes who had different leaders. These tribes often fought each other.

Some of the tribes accepted the Romans and paid taxes to them but other tribes rebelled and fought against the Romans. The main rebellion was the one led by Boudicca but over the years there were other rebellions too.
